Report on Guest Lecture on Trading Strategies

Advanced Technical Analysis, a course for finance specialization provides knowledge and skills required for a trader to execute trades successfully, employing the technical tools. The present online trading platforms enable the trader to trade from the comfort of his desk.

The speaker Mr. Vamsi an experienced trader with a decade's expertise in the field, discussed few trading strategies with an objective of polishing trading skills of the cohort of MBA Semester III

He addressed the gathering on the various aspects that influence traders practice for Intraday and delivery positions. The influence of the volume and open interest on the price read by the trader before taking the trades, determining the reward that may be expected with the risk associated with it.

He also touched upon the platforms provided by NSE and other exchanges and the availability of the data that is necessary for the dealers, the inferences that can be drawn out from the OI & Volume data.

The need for discipline, while having control on emotions by the trader to be successful, mistakes by beginners in the stock market and the algo trade were also touched upon.

The students found it be interactive and was a great learning opportunity, hearing from the Industry expert himself. The areas discussed are the building blocks which act as foundation and will be helpful for the students in corporate practice.
